

Before the shoot

With a new baby - everything is new! It takes time to get into a rhythm with your little angel, and predicting when naptime will happen is generally difficult. However, if you can manage to have baby fed and changed before the shoot, this will increase chances of sleep! If you have any blankets or props you'd like included in the photos, please lay them out ahead of time. Newborns are photographed naked, so there is no need to dress the baby before the shoot. Instead, loosen up the diaper so it doesn't leave marks on the skin and wrap the baby in warm blanket.

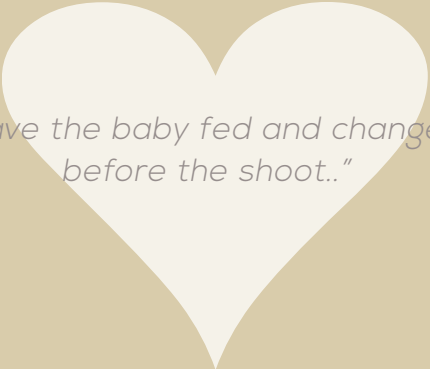

"Book your session at least 3 months ahead to assure time in my schedule ..."

"Newborns are best photographed under 2 weeks of age..."

"Do not dress the baby before the shoot: wrap the baby in a blanket.."

"Have the baby fed and changed before the shoot.."

During the shoot

The golden rule of newborn photography: babies are unpredictable! At just a few days old, a regular feeding, sleeping, and potty schedule is out of the question. I understand this, so I always make sure I have enough time in my schedule to work with your baby as long as necessary to get the shots I need. Although I have my bag of tricks to make the process efficient and fun, it all comes down to how the baby is feeling.

For posed sessions, I ask that parents are calm and wait patiently while I pose and photograph the baby. Of course, parents are welcomed and encouraged to participate in lifestyle images. Shots with mom, dad and baby are beautiful reminders of this special time in life.